

THE DAUGHTERS BROKEN-HEARTED.

No. 14 Queen street, Dutch Kills, Long Island City, is a low two-story frame building occu-her two stalwart sons, John, 26 years old, and William, 17 years old, and her two pretty, brown-eyed daughters, Kate, 21 years old, and Lizzie, 17 years old. Yesterday morning two policemen entered the house with search warrants to hunt for stolen goods. A few hours before, John Maikomt's shoe store, 303 Jack-

John Rankin, James Mullinif, 17 years old, of 229 Jackson avenue, and Charles Shannon, 28 years old, of 311 Jackson avenue, had been seen looking at the two premises the day previous. The two latter were already under arrest when the Rankin house was searched, accused of having a hand in the robbery. When the policemen made known their errand the widow Rankin strenuously objected. Tears streamed down her face.

The older daughter and mother became hysterical. The policemen waited until the first storm of passion had subsided, and then they led them out into the pelting snow and rain and took them to the station. When they learned that their two daughters were already in jail, the mother became even more demonstrative. The older daughter began to unbraide her mother for having disgraced them, while their gray-haired mother hung down her head and sobbed. When it came to locking them up in cells, Liz-he, the youngest of the family, cried until she could be heard outside; the situation was terrible. "Why do you not put me in there? Why do you lock me up? I did not know anything about it. I do not believe my mother did anything like this. Things before, my mother, when I looked up to her, she was always good to me. Her coming greatly affected the stoutest Sergeant. The whole family were concerned. John Markin, the eldest of the family, sent for the Sergeant and told him that his mother, sisters, and brother knew nothing of the robbery. He begged the Sergeant to let them go. The Sergeant said, "I will let you go, but you must tell me where the robbery and secreted the goods in his mother's house. He begged the Sergeant to let them go."

In the mean time policemen who had gone back to the house returned to the station with a bag full of new shoes that were identified as the shoes that had been stolen from the family store. They were found secreted in Franklin house. The finding of the shoes seemed to complete the evidence against them. Mulliff and Shannon refused to say anything. William Franklin, his mother, and six sisters are held as accessories to the crime. They are accused of receiving stolen goods. A $10,000 Boulevarde belle is the first of a family will lead to the unearthing of a band of petty thieves who have been robbing stores and dwellings in Long Island City for several months.

A coincidence connected with the robbery of Aldonette's store is the arrest at 10 o'clock of a man known as Richard Tucker, 19 years old, who was released from the State Penitentiary last week ago yesterday.

His sentence of three years and three months for robbing the same store. It was then kept by John Hulsen. Tucker was accused of attempting to rob Mrs. Mulvey's store, 1010 Broadway, last night. He was in a room on a front window, but was discovered by Mr. Tucker, who gave an alarm. Tucker was in his stealing fort. He carried his shoes in a bag and was seen to throw them out the window. When he was taken to the police house, started out in his bare feet and named Tucker around the streets until he was finally caught. Police man Cameron, he was taken to the police house, where he was held and held without bail for examination.

NEWS OF THE RIDING ACADEMIES.

The week at the riding academies has been a practically complete one. The rings at all the academies have been in constant session by both old-timers and novices. The one big affair was the exhibition drill of Troop A at Dickel's Academy on Friday evening. The drill was a success from start to finish, and the hundreds of people who witnessed it were unanimous in their praise of the young troopers. Mr. Dickel was especially elated. He has always looked upon the members of the troop as his protégés, and to a certain extent oy are. But the man to whom the most noise is due, and to whose efforts the cavalry owes the success of their first "at home," Charles F. Eric, the Captain of the "Coops," at Cohn's Central Park, has many imitations. He has been made a feature of late, and they will be continued. At the last few music fides, the stage, and the artistic world have been represented in the person of Bishop Potter, little Elsie Leslie and sculptor John Quincy Adams Ward. Capt. Louis Wendell of the Central Park Audubon society, who

men, but as every night is engaged for the season by either a club or private class, he will have hard work unless some of the more fortunate organizations are willing to double up their riding.

Philip Hexamer's Hoboken Academy has had an excellent week. Mr. Hexamer's club is all riding hard, so as to be in trim for round-up in the spring, and his masters are unusually busy coaching beginners.

The Rev. Dr. Charles H. Eaton conceived the idea some time ago of getting up a music ride for charity, and he has been working for a long time, and now has everything in readiness. He has secured the cooperation of more than fifty drivers and had them talk the proprietor of one the big academics, into lending them his leg or some evening grills. The ladies doled out the cashiest man to per-suade was William Durkin Jr. When they called and stated his position he felt right in with them. He told them they could have the academy on the Boulevard any evening they desired. The ride will take place next Saturday evening, and the proceeds will go to fund to establish a country home for poor and sick children of New York City. Among patrons—on are Mrs. Donald Nicoll, Mrs. Albert Seiwald, Mrs. Walter Leaman, Mrs. Onofre Crum, Mrs. Lyman Brown, Mrs. George Johnson, Mrs. Arthur Cook, Mrs. D.A. Loomis, Mrs. E. H. Phillips, Mrs. H. Adams, Mrs. William Bell, and Mrs. Calvin Crum. Admission, $2; reserved seat checks, 50 cents.

At the Boulevard Academy there were three female rides last week. Proprietor Emil gave the first two, and one each was given by the Lawyers' Club.

At the Belmont the costume ride last Thursday morning was so much of a success that a young ladies' who participated in the affair are getting to get up another entertainment. This time it will be a flower ride, each rider to represent some flower. The ride will probably take place this week.

On Tuesday evening last the West End Riders man's academy in West 125th street. A number of Harlem young men and women are set up a new riding club. Among the boomers the scheme are Miss Susie Fechter, Miss S. Kellar, Miss Delehanty, E. P. Steers, Ann A. Taylor, William Ryer, Frederick Owen, and H. C. Byr.
